FOREWORD

Although this book is entitled, THOMAS M. LACEY'S FAMILY, his ancestry appears for more than a century earlier. This title seems appropriate because his issue is the first generation to be listed in entirety to the present time. Had a generation earlier, WILLIAM LACEY'S FAMILY, been the title, the work would have entailed location of descendants of his four daughters: Patience, Piety, Ruanna and Rachel, to the present time. Still a generation earlier than William's involves locating all descendants of the brothers and sisters to the current date of Thomas Lacey, Jr.: Amos, Samuel, William, Elizabeth, David, Ann, Ephraim, Esther, and Ralph. This would not be an impossible task but a very times-taking one, in particular, since many persons disassociated with the very excellent record-source of the Society of Friends during and after the Revolutionary War.

To those who generously contributed family information, gratitude is due for without them this book could not have evolved. Special acknowledgment is due Olevia Lacey Menges who, from the source of Pleasant Lake, Steuben County, Indiana, was indispensable in locating and remembering data. Helen Harpham Reisterer was the backbone by her persistant encouragement when hope for locating recent generations flagged and for her personal contact with many persons. Ida Lohmann's generosity in providing her compilation of the Pixley family is gratefully acknowledged. Recognition and gratitude is due the many fine library facilities throughout the United States, as well as the cooperative county court's personnel.

INTRODUCTION

Family legend, invariably, cited France as the country of origin for Laceys or de Lacys, however, answers were lacking about time and cause of immigration. Pondering that such an event would occur for some reason at some time, curiosity prompted questions leading to family contacts and delving into early records which, in turn, wrought enough material for this book.

At onset difficulty arose because of the great many immigrants of the Lacey name in nearly every province of Colonial America. Good fortune did favor a start with knowledge of Thomas Marshall Lacey's birth in Loudoun County, Virginia. From that point generations were pursued in both directions and, eventually, pieces of the puzzle fit together with fragmented edges in a few spots where information was sparse.

Errors, there will be despite good intention for perfection. For these apology is due. Aside from human error, discrepancies invariably occur between tombstone dates and family-record dates and between dates in records held by different families. Also, difficulty of reading old faded documents has produced errors in printed historical records. Double-dating in the 18th century, e.g., 1751/2, is the result of the changeover in England and her possessions from the Julian calendar to the Gregorian Calendar. New Year's Day was changed from March 25 to January 1, in September of 1752. Thereby, confusion came about for a few years as to whether the year was Old Style or New Style.

No attempt has been made to search this family beyond William's marriage to Mary Parlett in Isle of Wight, England, although from parish records of the time, it would not be an impossible task. Roll of the House of Lacy does mention Isle of Wight in one place, "Amica de Clare, the Lady Redvers of the Isle of Wight". This was the 13th century, a direct descendant of Walter, Lord of Meath, of the Irish House of Lacey.

The surname of Lacey is not the original name. One suggestion has been made that when "de" was dropped from De Lacy, the "e" was added to Lacy, becoming Lacey. This thought is valid although many use the Lacy spelling without "de". Changes in spellings of names, especially in very old ones, are common. A short time after the adoption of surnames, those who could read and write, frequently attempted to show their versatility by writing their names in as many ways as possible with result that several surname spellings are to be found in the records of a single person. Members of the family were free to adopt any of those spellings. Name heredity became general in British Isles during or after the 13th century, the surname having come into use in the 11th century when so many persons of the same single name required further distinction. The Coats-of-Arms and Scottish Tartans had preceded surnames in distinguishing families of the British Isles. Ability to read and write was limited even through the middle of the 19th century in this country. My grandfather, born 1862, being a school teacher for a short time, and an enterprising soul, went about the country-side in his younger days and taught interested heads-of-families to write their names for the sum of $1. Ignorance and convenience affected changes of name spelling. Often a clerk would write a name as he heard it and, with useage, this became the person's new name. This was a frequent occurrence with foreign names. Again, some persons desired to change their names and start afresh in the "new world". Within a family brothers sometimes adopted a spelling variation to distinguish his particular line. Some variations of Lacey are: de Lacy, DeLacy, Lascie, Lascelles, Lassey, Lasci, Lacie, Lassy and Lessay.

Vera Lacey Casey recalled Daniel Webster's words which seem apt for a conclusion,

"He who careth not from whence he came, careth little whither he goeth."

EXPLANATION OF NUMBERING

The number preceding the name represents the generation and the position of birth within that generation, e.g., 16327, as follows:

- 1 - 1st child of the first generation.
- 6 - 6th child of the second generation.
- 3 - 3rd child of the third generation.
- 2 - 2nd child of the fourth generation.
- 7 - 7th child of the fifth generation.

THE BEGINNING

The origin of our Lacey ancestors directs one toward North Country, or Scandinavia, for the first generally known recorded history comes from northern and western France where Vikings raided and disrupted the country in the 9th and 10th centuries. AD-912, peace was made between them and Charles the Simple, under which terms this part of France was conferred to the Northmen. Thus, Normandy came into being. The fierce customs of the new occupants tempered by the more cultured Franks, combined with their natural hardiness, evolved into valiance, chivalry and culture accredited to the Normans of history.²

From Lassy (or Lessay) 40 kilometers south of Bayeaux, Normandy, and under the Bishop and Cathedral Order of Bayeaux at Amaye and Campeaux,² two brothers, Ilbert and Walter, (whose father was Lord Hugh of Lassy and Campeau, the Sieur de Lasci of Normandy)¹ accompanied William the Conqueror in his conquest of England, 1066. One source, studiously, considers that these men were from a not-too-important family,² while the other classes them as nobility even before the Norman Conquest, evidenced by an excerpt from Sir John Ferne's (d. 1610) Blazon of Gentry and Lacies Nobilitie, published in 1586.¹ And, still a third source recalls, "The ancient Irish antiquaries say that Charlemagne was the ancestor of Lacy", listing 29 generations from Charlemagne (742-814) to Piarus Oge (or Young Pierce) living, 1691.³

Reward for Ilbert and Walter de Lacy's service to Duke William was not small. Walter De Lacy received lands in West Midlands and West Herefordshire. Ilbert De Lacy received lands north of the Humber River at Pontefract and South Yorkshire, although law-and-order was not established for the latter until about the time of William's death, twenty years later. They were two of the most important families in England following the Conquest. Walter died tragically on March 22, 1085, by "falling from the lofty battlements of newly-built St. Peter's Church at Hereford, while making an inspection". Ilbert (Hilbert, Gilbert, etc.) possessed vast territories in every direction. Remains of many of the castles exist and the British Museum preserves a charter of Ilbert de Lacy, witnessed by William the Conqueror. Beautiful gardens at Pontefract are preserved and carefully tended, although, only the outline of the castle remains.¹ John de Lacie, Baron, Earl of Lincoln, Lord of Hatton Castle, (d. 1240) was the fifth signer of Magna Charta.^{2b}

Hugo or Hugh De Lacy, who died 1186, great grandson of Walter, accompanied King Henry the Second to Ireland in 1171 and obtained from the monarch a grant of the entire kingdom of Meath. He erected numerous castles and endowed a few monasteries.¹ "He is described in Holingshead: 'His eyes were dark and deep-set, his neck short, his stature small, his body hairy, not fleshy, but sinewy, strong and compact; a very good soldier but rather harsh and hasty'. It appears from Hammer and others, that he was an able and politic man in state affairs but very ambitious and covetous of wealth and great possessions. He is, also, represented as a famous horseman. De Lacy's second wife was a daughter of King Roderick O'Connor. The descendant De Lacys were lords of Meath, earls of Ulster, and founded many powerful families in Meath, Westmeath, Louth and in Limerick.' (Conellan)"³

And so, the Norman feudal system of taxations (tribute) was introduced into Ireland supplanting the communal system which provided representation by duly elected "free suffrage of tribesmen", laments one of the native Irishmen. He had not fully forgotten the history wrought by the De Birminghams, De Lacys, De Courceys, FitzStephens "and the like". He further recalls that in 1691 old tribal chiefs were gone; Norman lords were gone; in 1701 Cromwell's work was gone.⁵

In 1611 farmers from Scottish lowlands, and a few from England, were brought to original tribal territory of Ireland. The native tribesmen with their cattle were driven to less fertile districts of Connaught, while the valleys were tilled by the newcomers. The Scots introduced their religious problems with three parties in conflict: the Catholics, dispossessed of revenues and buildings, Anglicans who had gained the properties, and Presbyterians - Puritans.⁶

Resulting from the new religion introduced by Henry VIII, a grand plan was conceived for emergence of Protestantism and elimination of all politically unfavorable, Protestant or otherwise, which progressed through various forms of estate seizure and cruelty, sometimes based on "legality".⁶ Two-thirds of Ireland's lands, including the vast De Lacy estates, were confiscated, supplanted by Cromwellian "Adventurers for Land in Ireland" (a few from Ireland who supported the tyrant but, in the main, from England) who were rewarded "with estates and manors of 1,000 acres at low reagents".³ Ironically, included on the list of the "Adventurers" were the names of Lacey, Lacy, Lacye, D'Lacy and De Lacy. Through the tyranny of Cromwell thousands in Ireland were dispossessed and given until March 1, 1655, to find new homes. The exiles dispersed to Russia, Austria, Spain, Poland and the two Americas. Captains and men-of-war of the Irish, amounting to more than 40,000, were banished into Spain.¹ Between 1641 and 1652, 616,000 Irish had perished by war, starvation and plague. The remainder transplanted into Connaught. Among the distinguished exiles Marshals Peter and Maurice de Lacy of Russia and Austria are renowned during the 18th century. It is regrettable that the copyright owner of Roll of the House of Lacy was not located. His mezzatint by Haid of Peter Lacy (Lasci) Irish soldier and Russian Count (1678-1751), would have been a handsome and creditable addition to this book. Louis de Lacy became Duke of Ultonia, Captain-General of Spain.¹

And in England and Europe of the 16th and 17th centuries, the new religion wrought splinter sects with a variety of names including Socinians (Unitarians), Waldensists, Jansenists, Anabaptists, Mennonites, Fifth Monarchists, Dissenters and Puritans, one of whose off-shoots was the Quakers.

The Quaker religion was founded about 1650 by George Fox (a friend of William Penn) who, though a rough unlearned man, held such deep religious conviction and preached so eloquently, many were convinced. In 1672, he visited the Colonies, including Isle of Wight County, Virginia, making additional converts. Quakerism was one of the more important religions in Colonial America reaching a descent during and following the Revolutionary War. The explanation of their name, according to Fox, "Justice Bennett of Derby was the first that called us Quakers, because we bid them tremble at the word of the Lord. This was in 1650".⁷

Oliver Cromwell, despite his native Puritan faith, did tolerate some sects in which he differed from the Puritan Parliament. He was responsible for imprisonment of several hundred Quakers from fear of civic disturbance. The Quaker's peculiarities of refusal to take an oath, feeling that their word was sufficient, their refusal to remove hats to anyone, their insistence upon the use of non-pagan dating, e.g., "the 10th day of the 2nd month 1695" instead of the common usage, "10 February 1695", etc., led to imprisonment of many thousands of whom a large number died in jail. Toward the end of Cromwell's life (d. 1657) he appeared to suffer a questioning of his cool crimes of 8 years of horror and bloodshed in Ireland in the name of religion. "The curse of Cromwell on you", particularly in Ireland, remains an expression of hatred after three hundred years.⁷

Despite Charles II's toleration of religion, persecutions continued under the, now, predominantly Anglican Parliament. New homes were sought in other lands, a great many emigrating or being transported to the Colonies, along with exiled convicts. An indentured servant was one who transported at another's expense, in exchange for which he contracted for, usually, five or seven years of service. At the end of his servitude 100 acres was granted to him, for good service.

THIS CONCLUDES ALL LINES, EXCEPTING THAT OF THOMAS, 6TH CHILD OF WILLIAM AND MARY LACEY.

And, of the times: The father of Nathaniel Greene, who was a Quaker Preacher, felt that duty required him to flog his son with a horsewhip.

'Students' he said 'like horses on the road,
Must be well lashed before they take the load;
They may be willing for a time to run,
But you must whip them, ere the work be done.'

Crabbe's Schoolmaster.

Christopher Dock, a Mennonite, who came from Germany in 1714 and taught school in Philadelphia County, Pennsylvania, 1718-1771 held an opposing view to use of the rod. "One wagoner does not use half as hard shouts, scourges and blows as another and yet drives as hard or even harder over mountain and valley, and when the work is done the willing horses and the wagoner have had it the easier.-----They have done willingly what others have done through severity." This gentle devout man's method of teaching was outstanding in the 18th century to the point that the German publisher, Christopher Sauer in 1750, conceived having him write his teaching methods with intention of printing them to which Dock consented but would not allow publication until after his death, feeling sin in doing anything for "his own praise, credit or elevation". Friends, finally, in 1769, overcame his scruples and the pamphlet of fifty-four pages was printed.

This essay is the earliest written and published in America on the subject of school teaching and the only known picture of the colonial country school. It is, also, the first known original American publication on the subject of etiquette with "A Hundred Necessary Rules of Conduct for Children" which were published about 1764 in Saur's Geistliches Magazien. His description of procedure with everyday school situations, teaching methods and problem handling are carefully detailed. Children of different religions attended his school, so that he was unable to teach one form of Catechism but he was permitted to sing hymns and songs and to acquaint students with the New Testament. He calls attention to the depraved condition of the young and the many difficulties of the world by which they become depraved and injured by the older. "Since this land has been kept free from the ravages of war ... there has been little heard of such (evil) words. But the more men come to this land the more of such wares come ... so much of a mixture ... to the injury of the youth."¹⁰

And, of the times,

A petition to Congress, Feb. 1, 1798, from Settlers of the Scioto River Valley, within the Virginia Military Lands is of interest in reflecting one of the troubles of the early settlers. "We humbly conceive the smallest tracts too large for us to purchase and risk the loss of half the purchase price. ... we are in the midst of an Indian country and the most exposed part thereof ... disappointed in getting lands on easy and equitable terms, in hopes of which we adventured our lives and the lives of our families. The Virginia Military Lands are held generally by persons who will neither sell or settle them ... many of our friends in a state of despondency have accepted offers of the King of Spain and have and are daily removing from their own country ... Your humble petitioners pray that your Honorable Body will pass a law to lay a tract of land, one-half into tracts containing 160 acres and the other half into tracts of 640 acres; to be sold to none but those who will become actual settlers thereon in a limited time. We beg leave to suggest whether it would not tend to the more speedy settlement of the lands and bring the value thereof sooner into the public Treasury, was the price lowered or the present mode of sale altered".

Following the Revolutionary War the United States claimed possession of British-held land between the Ohio River and Canada establishing the Northwest Territory. The territory was divided to satisfy various government needs. "The Seven Ranges", a Congress-held land, which contained Belmont County, was the part to which William Lacey with his family migrated. The land which he purchased was dealt through Jefferson County at Steubenville, Ohio, which was the original county from which Belmont, Monroe, Harrison, etc. were carved.

The Quakers were leaders of the western migration to Ohio, from Virginia, and to Indiana, from North Carolina, between 1803 and 1822. From the Fairfax MM in Va. to the Short Creek MM, Harrison County were the names "Lacey" and "Schooley" (ref. 4th Generation). "Their protest against slavery took the form of migration. These emigrants composed the middle and lower ranks of society, who had few or no slaves, and who could not come into economic competition with slavery". (Dr. Stephen B. Weeks)27 first home was a cabin 16 ft. square with one room above and one below, built without nails. Keith Lacey contributed some stories of interest about his grandfather and grandmother, as follows:

- "When Thomas Marshall (Lacey) was inquiring about land in Indiana, a survey party told him of 240 acres in Steuben Co. where hickory, oak and walnut trees were virgin forests, and there was a deep cold spring on a hill side. He found the Oak Tree but could not locate the spring. As he was pushing through heavy brush, he fell into it. The water was so cold he knew at once it was the one he was searching for. He came to Indiana the first time on horseback. He slept on the ground and complained of discomfort when he put on his leather breeches in early morning because they were so cold. Nancy was from a large family and her sisters came to visit her in Steuben Co. many times and she returned the visits in Ohio but they would not let her smoke her clay pipe in their homes. She had to go outdoors to smoke, so she said, 'When they came to my home in Indiana, I gave them a real smell of smoke'. She was known to be a hardy pioneer woman whom everyone liked. Her grandson, Mark, said she always waved and smiled at him when he passed".

Word-of-mouth gives various versions of his occupation: surveyor, tailor, shoe-maker, farmer. He is known to have been an excellent marksman.

To locate your relationship:

You will note that the two upper lines are outlined in heavy double lines which are the common progenitor and his or her descendants. The CP is the head of these two lines of direct descendants. All of the diamonds, inside of these heavier lines, show the relationship of these descendants to the CP, and to themselves.

An example for the use of this chart:

If you are the 3 GGN, great great great grand-nephew of CP, the common progenitor, and the person you are interested in is the 6GGS of the same common progenitor, then you trace the two columns until they intersect, (3 GGN on one side and 6 GGS on the other) and you will find that you are 5th cousins, 2 times removed. Just as column 2, on the left, GS and column 2 on the right, N, would intersect to a 1st cousin relationship.

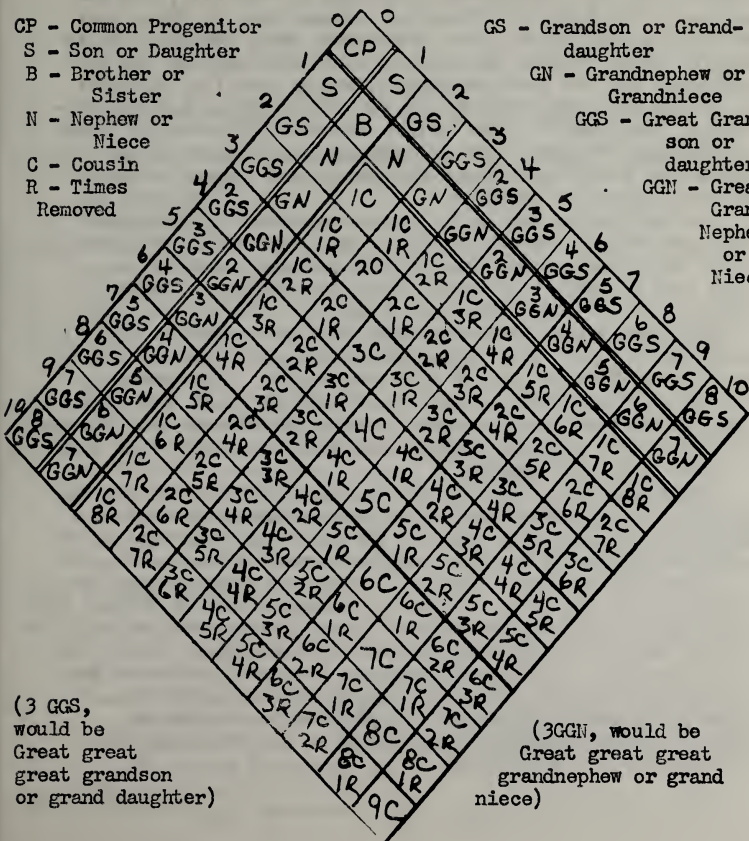

This chart can be extended beyond the 10 generations, to give whatever number of generations you wish by following this same pattern and extending the diamond shape at the lower portion of the chart.

(From Notebook Series of the Seattle Genealogical Society, Inc.)

A chart to locate relationship of one descendant to another descendant of a common progenitor. (This type of chart is used as a guide by many courts.)

CP - Common Progenitor
S - Son or Daughter
B - Brother or Sister
N - Nephew or Niece
C - Cousin
R - Times Removed

GS - Grandson or Granddaughter
GN - Grandnephew or Grandniece
GGS - Great Grandson or granddaughter
GGN - Great Grand Nephew or Niece

STEBEN COUNTY, INDIANA

This part of the Northwest Territory, comprised of dense forest, lakes and prairie and abounding in wild life, was inhabited by the tribe of Potawatimi Indians who, in 1833, sold the land to the United States Government which became known as Congress Land. "Under the Confederation the Congress was the government and the forms of speech seem to have long retained the notion that what belonged to the United States was the property of Congress."¹³ The Indians called it "Nipcondish" meaning "pleasant waters". The Indians were moved west of the Mississippi River excepting a few chiefs who longed to remain and were settled in Michigan.

The last Indian battle in Indiana occurred at Tippecanoe (Battleground) on November 7, 1811, when the Indians attacked in the early morning and were quickly subdued. A brief war, Black Hawk in 1827, in Northern Illinois terminated Indian fighting east of the Mississippi River.

The first school in Steuben Township was opened in the spring of 1836 with Lucy Avery as teacher. She received $1.25 per week and "boarded round" with her pupils. There was no uniformity of textbooks as each pupil brought books from home. Goose quills were used for pens. The first building was of logs with desks made from slabs split from logs, and seats were similar slabs with no backs.¹⁴

"The women spun flax and wool and made the clothing for the family. A black silk dress to be worn on Sunday and a paisley shawl were marks of aristocracy. Neighbors may have been miles apart geographically but barn raisings, husking bees and spelling school brought them together." Eggleston mentions that the publication of his book, The Hoosier Schoolmaster, in 1871, gave rise to an amusing revival of the spelling-school as a means of public entertainment, not in rustic regions alone, but in towns, also. The furor extended to the great cities of New York and London, and reached at last to farthest Australia, spreading to every region in which English is spelled or spoken. But the effect of the chapter on the spelling-school was temporary and superficial.¹⁵

APPENDIX

BOYD, ANN or ANNA.

Her parentage is not located, however, she did migrate from Washington County, Maryland, with her husband, William McGaughey and children in 1810 to Belmont County, Ohio, settling in Smith Township.

The 1st Federal Census of 1790, Washington Co., Maryland, lists:

William Boyd, Hagerstown

Walter Boyd, Hagerstown

These two also took the Oath of Fidelity in same Township in 1778.

The 2nd Federal Census of 1800, Washington Co., Maryland, lists:

Walter Boyd, Hagerstown

Joseph Boyd, Hagerstown (This name, also, appears in Reformed Church Records of Hagerstown, late 1700's)

Robert Boyd, Linton Twp.

William McGaughey, Linton Twp.

The fact of these last two names appearing together in the same location presents the possibility of Robert as Anna's father, he, perhaps, being a descendant of Walter or William. As with other immigrants, there were many of the same name. With Boyds, generally, there were two groups of immigrants, the Presbyterian and the Quaker.

From Encyclopedia Britannica, Boyds once held the destinies of Scotland in their hands, the main family living at Ayrshire, in prominence, the Lords or Earls of Kilmarnock. And much later, in 1603, a group of Scots were induced to settle Ulster upon the millions of acres in possession of James I (who succeeded Elizabeth I, and was titled James VI of Scotland, son of Queen Mary). Among those Scots taking large grants of land in County Tyrone was Sir Thomas Boyd. This was the first establishment in Ireland of persons known as Scotch-Irish. The incident of their settlement was not without bloodshed between them and the Irish. After James II's defeat and dethronement, about 1690, Ireland fell under English rule. Its few industries, including the valued wool industry in competition with England's, were crushed, lands confiscated, heavy taxes and cruelty inflicted, occasioning the great wave of migration to the Colonies. In Ulster the Scots had remained an isolated colony preferring to retain their pure Scottish blood and religion rather than integrating which was, undoubtedly, a mutual preference so far as the Irish were concerned. However in the American Colonies, they became bed-fellows, finding common bonds in their pioneer confrontations.

The name, Boyd, according to O'Hart derives from the Irish word, Buidhe, meaning yellow. (Refer Mc Gaughey)(Refer Tartans)

GRAMLING, MARY, MARY LYDIA, SARAH, WILLIAM, PETER

Family records list Mary, William, Sarah, and Peter as issue of Isaac Gramling, b. 1805, d. 1883, a native of Bucks Co., Pa., who moved to Berks Co., Penna., near Reading, later moving to Stark Co., Ohio, and then to DeKalb Co., (bordering Steuben Co.) Indiana, where he settled a tract of unimproved land at Smithfield Twp. in 1849. Mary Lydia was a granddaughter of Isaac and daughter of Peter Hornberger Gramling. Isaac and wife, Mary (Hornberger) Gramling had 11 children, 8 of whom accompanied their parents to DeKalb Co. (Refer Hornberger)

Isaac's parentage is not located. Records of some 9 or 10 immigrations to Pennsylvania from the Palatines (region of the Rhine River to include Switzerland and Bavaria) show spellings of Gramlich, Gramling, Gramley, Gramli, Kramling, Crumly, Gramleigh, Gremmeling, etc. between the years 1709-1803. Tax records and church records (German-Reformed Church) of the 18th-19th centuries, Penna., list these names, but none led to Isaac's parentage. Of the Penna. Archives Tax Lists, Berks Co., Reading Twp., a George Gramling paid a tax in 1779. In the same county about 5 miles away at Cumru Twp., he paid a tax in 1784. At Goshenhoppen which extended along Perkioman Creek, counties of Philadelphia (later to split becoming part of Montgomery and Lehigh Counties), Berks and Bucks, was a colony of lowland German Protestant immigrants. Goshenhoppen is thought to be a word of Indian origin, the name being changed to Churchville, and still later, to Bally.²³ The Reformed-Lutheran Church Records of Eastern Pennsylvania list Heinrich Gremmerling and Catherina marrying bet. 1747-58, and Johan George Gramling as Sponsorer at a birth in 1755. Adam Gramlin served as "Commisary General of Military Stores" during Revolutionary War from Berks Co., Penna. He was from Cumru Twp. and his surname was variously spelled, Gramley, Gramlich and Gramling on tax lists. Another Adam Gramling (with an annual Gramling reunion in South Carolina) immigrated to South Carolina from Bavaria, ca 1750, had a large family who remained in the south, but a coincidence does exist in the wife's names: the Pennsylvania Adam Gramling married Chloanna Gassoway (DAR or SAR Records) and the South Carolina Adam Gramling married Christina Gassoway. The Gramling lineage follows:

- Isaac Gramling married Mary Hornberger, b. 5-11-1808, d. 4-18-1882 "73 yrs, 11 mo 7 da". 11 Issues.
1. Peter Hornberger Gramling, b. 5-2-1830, Bucks Co., Penna., d. 2-28-1891, 61 yrs.; settled in Dekalb Co., Ind.; mbr. of Barker's Chapel; Postmaster at Summit, Ind., married Lavina Strickler, 4-11-1861, by G. Schloper, Minister of the German-Reformed Church, Ohio, dau. of Anna Voight and ? Strickler; b. High Mount (8 miles north of Hallem), York Co., Penna., to Stark Co., Ohio, where she was raised by her maternal grandparents, the Voights; b. 2-7-1842, d. 1930, 88 years; Peter met her there at Springfield, Stark Co., when he was working in the area. Her Grandfather Voight operated a tavern on the Turnpike. Lavina's mother, Anna Voight married "Danny" Meyers or Myers and had seven children: Henry, Shallie Crumbling, David, Clelland, Nathaniel, Sarah Arnold and John, and Danny operated a tavern, also, in Springfield.
 2. Richard K. Gramling, b. 1831, Penna., settled a fine farm near Auburn, Ind., 1860, and married Margaret Mortoroff in 1858. They had one issue, William Albert, b. 9-24-1859, who married Mary Chapman and had 6 issues.

William Penn's letter to Margaret Fox, wife of George Fox who founded the Quaker religion, 29 8th mo. 1684 (quotation from Mrs. Mary Balderston) says, "Poor Cut Hurst and Brother deceased soon after arrival, fixing on a low marshy place (tho a dry banck was not a Stone's cast from you) for ye rivers sake; they had ye ague and feaver but (there had been) no Sickening in any other settlements."

HORNBERGER, MARY.

Mary's parentage is not located, however, much is available on the Hornberger name in Pennsylvania records. Immigration records list them among persons from the Palatinate (lowland Germany to include Switzerland, Bavaria, etc.), Strassburger listing some dozen with various name spellings who entered at Pennsylvania. One in New York is of particular interest: Thomas Hornberger or Homberger, a debtor for subsistence in New York City was one of the Conrad Weiser party to Bucks Co., the first settlement at Goshenhoppen (Perkioman Valley, Swatara Penna.) 1723, from the Hudson River Settlement to Tulpehocken Valley.

In 1710, New York census lists: Hornberger, 2 adults, 1 child;
" 1712, " " " " " 1 adult.

The Dutch settlement in New York so mistreated the indenturees that escape occurred at every opportunity, many having gone to live among the Indians.

Another item of interest from the State Archives at Speyer, Germany (microfilm of Early Church Records of Eastern, Penna.), "Jakob Hornberger, 1749 dasel bst ziehet in Americam - list of emigrans from Zweibruecken of the same place with his wife." This does not necessarily mean that Jakob was a native of Zweibruecken. The land of the Palatines had been so ravaged by Louis XIV in his religious zeal that it was impossible to subsist in the area, so homes were sought elsewhere, some eastward and north, some westward to the Colonies, sometimes stopping for a few years at locations enroute.

JARVIS, SARAH.

Her family is not located, however, the name is derived from the French, Gervaise. With the influx of Huguenots in the 17th century into England, her having a French background is not too unlikely. (Ref. Canby)

MCGAUGHEY, NANCY.

Parentage of William McGaughey, Nancy's father, is not established. His first known whereabouts are at Washington Co., Maryland, where family legend recalls that he bred horses on his farm prior to departure for Belmont County, Ohio, in 1810. Since he was approximately 8 years older than wife, Anna Boyd, it is not unlikely that he had an earlier marriage. This assumption is based on dates in the census record and the fact that it was highly unusual for a male to remain unmarried beyond 21 years of age at that time of history. He served in the War of 1812 although the National Archives has no information relating to genealogy, which would indicate that he either did not apply for pension or bounty lands, or that the records have been destroyed through fire or war.

One family of McGaughey in Ohio pronounces its name as "McGoy". It is, also, recognized by pronunciations of "McGaffy" "McGahee", and "McGawhee". Searching records becomes complicated. An interesting research on the name by Hester Grier

McGaughey, b. 1870, reveals from Library of Trinity College, Dublin, by Abbe (James) McGeoghagan (born 1721), an historian and author, educated in France:

"There has been great corruption of the most ancient names, particularly of the Anglo-Norman names of Connaught (N. Ireland). The Scots in Ireland found it easy to cross the twenty miles of water to the Galloway Coast and an early clan conquering a large part of that territory, gave to it the name of 'Scotland', so that very naturally we find many Scottish names occurring both in Ireland and in Scotland. The name, 'McGaughey', is a corrupted and anglicized form of a very early name in Ireland.

in 76 AD the monarch divided Ireland into five provinces, Leinster, Munster, Ulster, Connaught and Meath; ----lasted until the Norman Invasion. Eochy Moyvane was the last pagan monarch. His son, Niall, the 126th King, received Saint Patrick on his second visit to Ireland. The Clan Colla had invaded Ulster in 322 AD and set up a kingdom called, Orgiall (Oriell and Ulidia) but Niall conquered him and again set up the Kingdom of Ulster and upon his death in 405 AD left the principalities to his sons. All members of his family were eligible to the Monarchy as well as to the Chieftainship of the Principalities, and were called 'Heirs to the Throne of Ireland and Ulster, and Hereditary Princes of Tyrone'.

Niall, b. 378 AD, son of Eochy, occupied Ulster, leaving it as an inheritance to his fifth son, Fiach, who founded the family named MacGeoghagan (sometimes written MacEoghain or MacGeoghagan) who belonged to Clan Colman.(Ref.: Tartans)

'Each' or 'Eoch' signifies a horse and the derivative 'MacEachan' is Horseman or Knight. Niall's fifth son, Prince Fiach, was given the deed of Meath with the barony of Moy Cassell and Fertullogh and his clan or followers are variously known as MacGeoghagan, McGachen, MacEachan, MacGeach, MaeGeach, MaeGahan, MacGeogh, MacKaughey, MacGeagan and MacGagen.' O'Hart says that the McGeoghagans descendants of Prince Cineal Fiacha of the ancient Kingdom of Meath, were one of the principal families of Clan Coleman and held the hereditary office of 'Marshalls of Meath'.

In an Ordinance Survey made in 1834, Ireland, Vol. 1928, p. 55, appears a list of old family names of the Kingdom of Ulidia and Oriel which were still in use in County Down, disguised in anglicized spelling". On the list is - - MacEodhadha, anglicized to MacKaughey, MacCaghey, McGaghey.²⁴

A genealogical searching colleague descended from William McGaughey and Anna, has the lineage as follows:

William McGaughey, b. 10-21-1774; d. Belmont County, Ohio, 8-12-1834.

m. Ann Boyd, d. 8-24-1832, Belmont County, Ohio, b. bet. 1780-90. Both are buried in the family cemetery located on the original homestead in Smith Township. It is atop a huge hill enclosed by an iron fence. William's and Ann's stones were in good condition in the 1960's. (Refer Boyd)

PARLETT, WILLIAM and ELIZABETH.

Falls MM, Penna., "Elizabeth Parlot (Parlet), wife of William bur. 11-3-1711." And, "William Parcell (or Partell) and wife, Elizabeth, son-in-law, William Lacy roof Isle of Wight, England"

William and Elizabeth may have been Huguenots, many having sought refuge in the British Isles during the late 1600's and early 1700's in flight from Louis XIV's persecution of Protestants. To exemplify the problem of spelling in early records, a "t" not crossed becoming an "l", or an "l" crossed becoming a "t", could form the new surname of a person. Generally, not too much regard was accorded accuracy of name spelling; many persons could neither read nor write. Louis Portal and son, Henry, were fine paper makers in France. The latter fled the country and started a mill in Hampshire Co., England, introducing a superior paper to any existing in his refuge country. Whereas, Parlett and Portal are not the same name, a genealogical searcher recognizes that strange things occurred to names during this time.

In 1732, John Perlett, and in 1751, John and Fred Perlett, Huguenot refugees from France, immigrated to America. The Huguenots were the fine craftsmen of France contributing greatly to the trade and quality of life of every country they entered.

RICHARDSON, SARAH.

Nothing has been located on this family from Loudoun County, Virginia. As a background the name of Richardson was prominent in Quaker records of Middletown, Pennsylvania.

SMITH, WILLIAM.

Born in England, died 10 Dec. 1740, Wrightstown, Bucks Co., Penna., it is deduced in Welcome Claimants that William Smith was one of 3 servants of Phineas Pemberton who came on the ship

"Friends' Adventure" to Pennsylvania. Several of the same name lived in Pennsylvania at this time.

In a warrant dated, 10 3 mo. 1718, he "requested a re-survey of 100 acres purchased some 20 years previously adjoining his other land" at Wrightstown.¹⁷

On 4 7th mo. 1690, intention to marry was passed by Friends, Middleton, Bucks Co., the marriage to Mary Croasdale taking place in John Chapman's home. (refer Croasdale) They had 7 children: Margaret (Pearson), Mary (Atkinson), William who m. Rebecca Wilson b. 12 5th mo. 1726, Sarah b. 12 8th mo. 172₂, Thomas b. 30 10th mo. 1728, Hannah (Lee), and Lydia (Heaton). By an earlier marriage in England, Mary (Croasdale) Smith had a daughter, Elizabeth (Watson) dec. prior to 1730. Mary was born Yorkshire, England, 30 8th mo. 1669, buried 16 10th mo. 1716, Middletown, Bucks Co., Penna.

William married 2, Mercy (or Marcy) ca 1720, Wrightstown, Soc. Fr. Records of Births:

Elizabeth, b. 10th 7 mo. 1730

SPENCER, ANN.

Born 16 11th mo. 1737, dau. of William and Elizabeth (Lewis) Spencer of Abington and Middletown, Philadelphia MM, Penna.

"Ann Hayhurst of the County of Harford, Maryland, who was sick in the Twp. of Northampton, Bucks Co., Penna., when on 6 May 1789, she signed by mark, her Will, probated 25 May 1789, naming children James Hayhurst, David Hayhurst, Hannah Hayhurst, Sarah Newberry", etc., thus indicating that Elizabeth must not have been living. Although, it is peculiar that she names 2 grandchildren, neither by name of Lacey. Since Thomas Lacey, Jr.'s children's births do not appear in Maryland Quaker records, it is possible that, 1. he and Elizabeth did not wait for second approval after their first intention to marry had been presented to Friends, and so were dealt with for marrying contrary to good order, i. e., in a public ceremony, or 2, that Thomas' brief affiliation with the Revolutionary War, contrary to Quaker beliefs, caused disownment by both the Society and by her mother. There is no proof. (refer Hayhurst)

TARTANS

Boyd is a 'sept' or family of the Stewart Clan. There are several Stewart Tartans.

McGaughy is not listed as a 'sept' or family, however, under the name in the Appendix is reference to Clan Colman. Coleman is a family of the Clan Buchanan in Scotland²⁸. "The name, Coleman, was originally Irish, Columban, a derivative of St. Columba, brought from Ireland by the Vikings. The Scottish branch of the Coleman family belongs to the Clan Buchanan. The name is found in Wales and England and very far back in history, originated, as is believed by some, in Germany. In Ireland the sept of Colmain was located in the barony of Tireragh, County Sligo."²⁸

Tartans under old custom,

"One colour in the clothes of servants;
two colours in the clothes of rent-paying farmers;
three in the clothes of officers;
five in the clothes of chiefs;
six in the clothes of poets;
seven in the clothes of kings and queens;
eight colours were worn by priests in the early Scotia church to indicate that while officiating the priest was superior to the king. The clergy sett was quieter designed of blue, black and white.

The dyes came principally from vegetation grown on their own lands, red from rock lichen, blue from the blueberry and alum, green from whin-bark and cow weed, black from alder tree bark, magenta from the dandelion, orange from bramble, and purple from sundew. Many of the old tartans exist and authorities are agreed that none of the modern dyes can excel in pleasing colors, quality and fastness, those produced by the Scottish Highlanders of the past. The clan system ceased to exist in the 17th century, although persons today retain the romance of bygone days by retaining useage of their Clan's tartans.
